South of the village of Stará Bašta, above the village of Tachty, there is an 11 meter high lookout tower Tomášov vrch. It offers beautiful views of the surrounding area, the Cerová vrchovina, neighboring Hungary and with good visibility to Kráľova Hoľa, which up to 80 kilometers away.

The sidewalk has seven educational boards. The length of the route is 3.8 km with an elevation gain of 307 m. The nature trail route starts at the info panel on the square in Stará Bašta. Impressive is his second stop, which is Baštianska diatréma - uncovered remains of a volcano Maar-type volcano, on the outskirts of the village. From here we choose the path on the right, which, accompanied by other information panels, will lead us first through a meadow, later through the forest to the top of Pohanský hrad. The local nature reserve with an area of 224 ha is the most valuable area in the Gemer part of the Cerová vrchovina. This place is rich in unique fauna and flora or rocky formations that were created thousands of years ago. Many rare animals have also found their home here, such as the raptor, the green lizard and others. Remains of a stone wall of ancient Celts and a rock town with 31 pseudo-karst caves, which were once inhabited by our prehistoric ancestors, are hidden on the edges of the top plateau. The route to Pohanský hrad can also be completed with a start in the village Hajnáčka, from where you can reach the top in about 70 minutes along the green tourist route. After about 50 minutes of walking, be sure not to miss the small turnoff to the short promontory - the volcanic mountain Tilič [475 m above sea level] providing photogenic views of Hajnáčka.

From the center of village Hajnáčka we walk along a yellow marked tourist route around the castle hill to the first of today's three peaks, Zaboda hill (469 m above sea level). The natural monument Zaboda represents a remnant of a lava flow from Ostrá skala. At the end of this lava flow, the rest of a small plateau has been preserved, the edges of which form 10 m high steep rocky slopes with thick basalt columns. The whole area with more than 100 years of forest is included in the highest, fifth degree of natural protection. From the top we continue for about 700 m to the tourist signpost Pod Zabodou, from which we continue to the left along the green sign.

First, a gentle, later steeper ascent, we reach the rocky peak of Steblová skala, which provides us with nice southwestern views of the Cerová Highlands. Its western wall is one of the most representative natural basalt outcrops with columnar separation in Slovakia. Around 35 - 60 cm thick columns are exposed to a height of up to 50 m and are arranged in the form of an inverted fan. At the top they are almost vertical, while the lower ones are inclined at an angle of 40 ° - 60 °. When ascending and descending from Steblová skala, care must be taken due to erosion and the formation of rubble. Following the same route, we return to the crossroads Pod Zabodou, from where we continue straight along the green sign to the opposite bank to the tourist guide Pod Deravou skalou.

OUR TIP

Definitely do not miss a visit to Hajnáčka Castle Hill, the dominant feature of the village. Beautiful views and crannies will be as reward for you after a short climb.

Here we feed on the blue tourist route, which we continue to the right. A steeper ascent to the Ragáč hill [537 m above sea level], which is the second youngest volcano in Slovakia, awaits us. It is one of the unique examples of neovolcanism in the Cerová vrchovina. Its top is a debris cone with volcanic bombs, debris and lava fragments. Accompanying features of volcanic activity are also volcanic-exhalation caves below the peak [Ragáčska studňa, Ragáčsky komín and Ebeczkého jaskyňa]. We are ending our journey with a 3 km long descent along the green sign from Ragáč to the starting point of today's tour, the center of the village Hajnáčka. The whole tour is 13 km long and takes about 5 hours, depending on the your condition.

The nature trail starts in the area of the Drieňok recreational facility in the village of Teplý Vrch, from where the protected area of Hikóriový porast leads to Drienčany. It was artificially created at the end of the 19th century, when North American woody plants were planted here - hickory, which successfully acclimatized. Next we walk around the bay of the Teplý Vrch reservoir, on the bank of which there is a bird lookout tower.

The nature trail can also be reached in Drienčany itself, where from stop no. 4 continues as a circuit. It consists total of 15 stops with information panels, which acquaint with the most characteristic natural conditions of the karst. The first interesting stop is a small part of the former castle above the village. After crossing the meadow and forest, we gradually come to the more attractive ones. At first it is an impressive deep hole in the forest, later another on the rocky edge of the valley. It was created by the overflow of a part of the ceiling of the Great Drienčany Cave, to the entrance of which the nature trail enters, but we will not get inside, entry into it is forbidden. A short descent takes us to the valley of the Blh river, which is lined with alders and hundreds of ferns. [Matteuccia struthiopteris] Here you will find educational panels informing about the fauna and flora of the valley. The following alerts us to three strange holes in the rock. These are the entrances to the Malá Drienčanská Cave, which is one of the

A short uphill climb the forest stairs, the crossing of a country road and the last educational panel await us. He informs us that we are standing by occasional karst lakes, which are created by clogging of cracks, which retains rainwater in karst pits. Behind him, in the distance, we are attracted by wooden figures. When we come to them, we see that they are part of the sundial. And they are not ordinary, they are fabulous. We are entering the village of Drienčany, the place of work of the well-known fairy tale collector Pavel E. Dobšinský. A few tens of meters below we find a fairytale maze, a shelter for rest, grilling and the construction of a bowling alley. We end the circular part of the educational trail at the nice bell tower and tomb of Pavel Dobšinský in the immediate vicinity of the church, where he worked as an evangelical priest for 23 years.

After the tour, you can refresh your energy at Pizza Caffè Darijan or at the Café and Restaurant Centrál. You will find them in the center of Tisovec near the Evangelical Church. Behind it, in the bookstore INFO Kníhkupectvo, there is also the Tourist information center, where you can buy books, maps or souvenirs.

The educational route that leads from Tisovec to the top of Tŕstie is 6 km long. It copies the yellow marked hiking trail. The signpost and the beginning of the educational trail are located next to the orientation map of the city, between the Evangelical Church and the City office. On the route, we will find five information boards, which are focused on the content of the Tŕstie mountain massif and its natural wealth. The journey to the top takes about three hours with an elevation gain of 740 m.

From the square we are heading over the railway bridge, after which we turn right and continue along the dirt road. We get to the overgrown spring, where there is a yellow sign, which leads a steeper ascent to the top. At the top we will find rare peat bogs and a monument to botanist Václav Vraný. From the crossroads of hiking trails, the green marked path will lead us to the cottage Tŕstie, red directly to the highest point of the eponymous hill, which is connected to the cottage by a yellow route. From the ridge poles and from the cottage we have nice views of the Muránska plain and the Low and High Tatras. Therefore, this area of Stolické vrchy is extremely attractive and interesting for tourism. On the route of the old historical road, today called the path of Mária Széchy, Tŕstie is an important tourist destination.

If you have a little extra energy we recommend that you take a short walk along the blue sign in the direction of Silica from the Lukáčova bučina crossroads. After about 1 kilometer you will reach the entrance of the deepest vertical abyss in the underground of Slovakia. Malá Žomboj is 142 meters deep. From the viewing platform, one can look directly into her spooky black throat.

The beginning of hiking from Jovice to Dievčenská skala is marked by a steeper climb, which lasts about 1.5 km. After climbing this section, we will get straight to Silica plateau. From there, the road is already relatively flat, without so much elevation. The blue sign accompanies us to a signpost called Lukáčova bučina. At this point, we turn left and follow the green sign. After a few minutes we come to a large meadow, where we find a signpost called Odbočka na Dievčenskú skalu. A slight climb awaits us here, at the end of which there is already a viewing platform. From Dievčenská skala cliffs we have the opportunity to see the Rožňava valley, Volovské vrchy, Turecká, Krásna Hôrka Castle and the High Tatras. We take the same route back to the Lukáčova bučina signpost. From there we continue straight along the green tourist sign towards Brzotínske skaly. After a short walk among the deciduous trees, we come to the tourist signpost Odbočka na Brzotínsku skalu. After about 15 minutes walk beautiful views of Rožňava and the surrounding villages await for us. In good weather we can see the peaks of the High Tatras or Kráľova hoľa.

You will not find any sources of drinking water on the plain. Therefore, supply a sufficient amount of fluids before the hiking tour. The official cycle route No. 5711 also leads through the plain. You can speed up the journey to Gerlašská skála by bicycle.

The blue marked hiking trail starts in Plešivec at the bus stop, near the Fresh supermarket. After crossing the busy main road, the bridge over the river Slaná and the railway crossing near the railway station, we continue to the foot of the plain, from where the asphalt road leads us 4 km long ascent straight to the plain. After more than an hour we reach the Ďulová signpost, from where a blue tourist sign leads across the Plešivec plateau to Gerlašská skala. Approximately in the middle of the route, we come across a unique technical monument from 1913 – Serényiho cisterna, which in the past was used to feed grazing cattle. The round concrete structure with a diameter of 16 meters and a depth of 4 meters has the ability to hold water with a volume of 960 thousand liters. After about 2,5 hours of walking the relatively flat route will take us to the Gerlašská skala signpost [752 m above sea level]. From there, it is less than 5 minutes to the lookout of the same name. From it you can see the hill Turecká, Volovské and Stolické mountains, under favorable conditions of High Tatras and Kráľova hoľa. We will take the same route back.

The hike can be shortened by 9 km. From Gerlašská skala you can descend in about 1.5 hours to the village of Štítnik, from where the bus connections is back to Plešivec or Rožňava.

In case of emergency a shorter descent can be chosen by turning from the blue route to the village Honce.

We start the route in the season by visiting the unique Gombasecká Cave with more than two meters long thin stalagmites, called “brčká”. Enchanted by its splendor, we set out from the bottom of the Slaná canyon to the Silica plateau. We will overcome the initial 225 altitude meters in 40-60 minutes. After 1.3 km of steeper ascent, we reach the crossroads Závozná, horáreň, from where it is exactly 2.5 km to Silická ľadnica without further elevations.

Silická ľadnica is the lowest situated ice cave in the temperate climate zone. From the viewing platform of its magnificent estuary, you can admire several meters long ice cubicles from spring to autumn. On the way back we continue from the crossroads Odbočka na Silickú ľadnicu to the right. After 10 minutes we turn left at the crossroads Bukový vršok to the village Silica.

OUR TIP

The introductory steeper section of the ascent to the plain can also be replaced by car or bus transport to the Závozná, horáreň stop. For an even closer approach to the Silická ľadnica, there is a parking lot on the way to Silica about 2 km away.

Here you can follow the yellow sign to the Farárova jama lake, about 5 minutes away, or follow the red sign across the village to the cemetery at its upper end. From here, its continuation will lead us in about 20 minutes to the extinct lake Jašteričie jazierko, once the largest karst lake in Slovakia. Its symbol is a rockery well preserved to this day. The Fabiánka hill above it provides views across Slovakia to the High Tatras in good weather.

We recommend a walk from the Gombasecká Cave area to the archeological site of the Paulin Monastery, where there is a modern bell tower that also serves as a lookout tower. Behind the road opposite the gate to the complex you will find a hidden karst spring Biela vyvieračka.

We invite you to one of the most valuable and best-preserved national reservation in the Muránska planina National Park. Wild, quiet or mysterious, it is still possible to mark this gorge, the bottom of which covered by forests, is lined on the sides by high, in places almost perpendicular rocky slopes and the gorge Strelnica and Šarkanice. The valley of decades left to self-development is a real bear paradise today. Bear mothers raise their young almost undisturbed here on steep slopes in the shade of the forest. Therefore, caution is warned throughout the tour.

The road through Martinova dolina begins near the hut in Paseky, which can be found on the right side of the road from Muráň to Tisovec, just before climbing to the Dielik saddle. In addition to the tourist board, there is also a small area next to the road suitable for parking a car. From there, the yellow tourist sign will take us through a short concrete tunnel to enter the 3 km long valley. After overcoming 559 altitude meters, in about 100 minutes we reach our destination, a mountain meadow with a hunting lodge in the middle, where we relax and enjoy the surrounding nature. Numerous species of plants that grow on the meadow during its flowering give it color and a characteristic scent, for which it also got its name – Voniaca [1113 m above sea level].

OUR TIP

In the Dielik saddle you will find one of the stops of the SNP (Slovak National Uprising) Gemer-Malohont route - the Dielik battlefield. The forest behind the monument hides restored military trenches built on the real site of the former fighting.

At the edge we see an educational panel that will teach us about the plants and animals that live here. We also read about the history of the hunting lodge. It is also up to us whether we will continue along the Šarkanice ridge, deeper into the heart of the plain through Ostrica and Siváková, whether we will return along the same route or take the sidewalk to the Rimava valley and end our wanderings in Tisovec. Hiking on the Voniaca mountain meadow can also be completed as a circuit that begins and ends in the town of Tisovec. The length of the circular route is 14 km with a total elevation gain of 775 m and a time requirement of approximately 5 hours. In part, it passes along the main road, where it is appropriate to be visible and careful.

In Bretka there is a mini open-air museum in the form of a beautiful cottage from the 18th century, which houses a beekeeping museum, a historic folk room and "Fairytale office".

profil. At this place, for the firsttime geologists managed to prove the occurrence of deep sea sediments in Slovakia. According to the village, the tectonic superunit of the Western Carpathians - Meliatikum is also named. On the way to this rocky outcrop we will encounter the rest of the old mill and test our courage on a wooden bridge over the river Muráň. To return to Bretka, you can use the nature trail or the cycle path over the Okrúhly kopec hill. At the end of the tour we come across a meadow to the old farm, where has to count on a deeper mud in rainy weather. This section can be passed by crossing the river on a metal footbridge. After turning right, the sidewalk will lead us past the cemetery straight to the village center.

We start hiking on Veľký Radzim in the picturesque mountain village of Brdárka, which is unique in Slovakia. It lies in the so-called sun trap, thanks to which about 4,000 cherry trees grow here even at an altitude of 600 meters about sea level. In the spring months, the local flowering orchards attract hundreds of visitors. Above them, the Veľký and Malý Radzim stand out as guardians, offering breathtaking views of this Gemer's paradise garden.

From the upper end of the village we head to the left, parallel to the green tourist sign. After a few meters, the tourist signpost will direct us to the right. Following the yellow sign, we climb through beautiful meadows to the Hora saddle. From this moment on, the road changes into a sidewalk. After half an hour we go to the rocky cliffs of Velký Radzim [991 m above sea level]. The most famous lookout point on it is the Vdovčikovo sedlo, which resembles a limestone throne. We sit comfortably in it and enjoy the views of the Bükk Mountains in Hungary, 70 km away, and the 300 meter deep situated Brdárka. The well-known Gemer robber Michal Vdovčík, who was seeking refuge from the Guards, also allegedly sat in it. Nature has endowed this place with a rich

Enthusiasts of the sacral monuments can recommend a visit to the Gothic churches with unique frescoes in nearby Koceľovce, Ochtiná and Štítnik on the way from Brdárka.

flora of thermophilic plant species. There is also a critically yellow-flowering endemic Ligularia glauca in danger, which does not occur anywhere else in Central Europe. We continue to the top from Vdovčíkovo sedlo. From the lookout points on its northern side we can see the peaks of the High Tatras. We descend along the ridge to the meadow saddle between Malý and Veľký Radzim, where we find a sitting area and an information panel. From here, before the trip to Brdárka, we will take about 1000 metres walk in a westerly direction, over the top of Malý Radzim, to its southern rocky lookout. In addition to the majestic Kráľova hoľa, we enjoy the view of Stolické vrchy or the plains of the Slovak Karst. The descent to the village will take us about an hour.
